Lauren Lee

Lauren Lee obtained her Masters degree in Journalism from University of Western Ontario and has been recognized nationally and internationally with awards relating to her career as a magazine feature writer. She worked for 10 years with The Canadian Sportsman, Canada's oldest magazine, until its closing in 2014. She is also an experienced copy writer, reporter and editor who continues to enjoy her work on projects in the fields of sport and law.

Lauren has combined her professional background with her personal experience as a cancer survivor to help expand and support healthcare patient storytelling programs and workshops. Lauren has written about her experience previously for Chatelaine and spoken to a variety of audiences in service of a patient experience curriculum, including hospital board of director's presentations, university lectures on global health, patient safety conferences, Canadian Foundation of Healthcare Improvement webinars, and surgical Grand Rounds. She has co-authored two published research articles on the impact of patient and family storytelling.
